The threat of working lands being converted to urban development continues, threatening the region's food industry and the social, economic, and natural values it provides.